Futskilz Soccer Leads Local Players To England

Eleven local soccer standouts will be competing this August against top English Premier League Academy teams under the guidance of Heidi Mueller, Program Director for the Western Kentucky based Futskilz Soccer Training. The twelve-day trip will allow the players to train with Mueller and other top-tier American and European trainers, attend instructional meetings with U.S. college coaches and play exhibition matches against legendary English academies such as Arsenal, Liverpool and Manchester United.

Futskilz Soccer conducts a variety of soccer programming designed to accelerate the development of individual player skills in all aspects of the sport. To earn the opportunity to compete internationally, each of the selected players worked to hone their talents in camps, classes, specialty clinics and tournaments directed by Mueller. The eleven players are Matt Adams, Lawson Crider and Hayden Mars from Graves County; Brandon Dodd and Travis Tucker from Marshall County; Matt Kreutzer, Preston Muir and Wesley Schrock from Paducah; and Jordan Benton, Matt Hines and Bobby Puckett from Murray.

When asked about these players, Mueller stated, "This group of young men has worked extremely hard over the past two years to be able to compete at this level. I am tremendously proud of their accomplishments. I look forward to watching them compete in England."

Since relocating her business from Cleveland, Ohio in the winter of 2006, Mueller has worked with more than 2000 players from around the region. Players under her instruction have seen their hard work rewarded with increased success in state, national, and now, international competition.
